Every year WLCOW makes £600 available to fund four awards to the Officer Cadets & Midshipmen of the University Royal Naval Unit WALES (URNU). The members are drawn from students at all the Universities & Medical Schools in Wales. The purpose of URNU is to expose undergraduates to the ethos of the Royal Navy and to develop leadership, technical skills and physical development. The URNU is based at the Maritime Reserves Centre, HMS CAMBRIA.

The Company has strong links with this ‘Stone Frigate’ with four former Commanding Officers’ of the Royal Naval Reserve being members, including two of our past masters.

The Awards were as follows:

- The Leadership & Resilience Award – Midshipman Megan Williams RNR

Awarded to the Officer Cadet who has demonstrated the highest leadership standards throughout the year, displaying resilience in the face of adversity and challenges and ensuring the unit is run effectively and efficiently.

- The Ship's Company Award – Acting Midshipman Cali Nelmes

Presented to the Officer Cadet who has most demonstrated commitment to achieving sea time whilst in the URNU and becoming part of the Ship's Company on vessels they have embarked on.

- The Training Officer's Award – Officer Cadet Simon Grainger

Presented to the Officer Cadet who has shown most improvement, dedication and development over the previous year. Engaging with the lessons, keenness and enthusiasm across all training serials.

- The Todd Burrow's Award – Acting Midshipman Georgia Stolliday

Presented to the Officer Cadet who has the enthusiasm, vim for life and positive attitude which Todd exhibited as a member of URNU Wales. Nominees will have a sporty outlook with a keenness for sports, AT and outdoor activities. Organisation of activities of this nature to the benefit of others is a common trait in nominees.
